

Food historian Sandy Oliver to speak at museum

Olivia Fortson

ofortson@charlotteobserver.com

Posted: Tuesday, Sep. 15, 2009

Sandy Oliver, a major figure in the culinary history world, will speak at "The Food Historian in the Kitchen: A Lecture By Sandy Oliver" from 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 21 at the Charlotte Museum of History.

Sandy Oliver, a major figure in the culinary history world, will speak at "The Food Historian in the Kitchen: A Lecture By Sandy Oliver" from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday at the Charlotte Museum of History, 3500 Shamrock Drive.

Oliver has been active in food and food history since 1971, when she developed a fireplace cooking program for an 1830s house at the Mystic Seaport Museum in Mystic, Conn. She is the author of books including "The Food of Colonial and Federal America." A freelance food writer and columnist in New England, she's also founder and editor of the periodical Food History News and runs the Web site www.foodhistorynews.com.

Admission is $10 ($7 for museum members) and pre-registration is required by calling 704-568-1774.