

TINA ADAMS AND ELOISE HALE JOIN HISTORY MUSEUM BOARD

CHARLOTTE, N.C., July 27, 2021 – The Charlotte Museum of History today announced that Tina Adams and Eloise Hale have joined its board of trustees. Adams is deputy city auditor for the City of Charlotte, and Hale is head of North American Corporate Communications for Electrolux.

“On behalf of the museum’s board of trustees, I’m so pleased to have Eloise and Tina join our team and bring their extensive business experience and unique perspectives to the board,” said Adria Focht, president and CEO of the museum.

As deputy city auditor, Adams supervises the city’s internal audit staff and manages city audits. In her previous roles, she served as chief financial officer for Child Care Resources Inc. and audit supervisor for the South Carolina Office of the State Auditor. She is the past president of the Association of Local Government Auditors.

Hale leads all corporate communications efforts for Electrolux’s North American business, including government relations, media relations, community relations, employee engagement and manufacturing communications. Prior to joining Electrolux, she spent 12 years in various corporate communications roles at Bank of America.

About The Charlotte Museum of History
